European Studies

The continuing education master's program in European Studies equips students with academic, practice-oriented and interdisciplinary knowledge of the economic, legal, political and socio-cultural development perspectives of European integration. Furthermore, it aims at analyzing specifics of information and knowledge management within the European Union.

The program is targeted at people who work or would like to work with national and multinational corporations, banks, the insurance industry, institutions in the field of social and culture management, national administrations, European and international organizations, as well as in continuing education and training. The program aims at expanding the participants' individual potential for innovation, their subject-specific competences and their personal experience.

International Studies

The Master of Advanced International Studies is a two-year academic program organized in cooperation with the University of Vienna. It focusses on the advanced study of politics and international relations, international economics, history, international and European law. The program is based on the principles of multidisciplinary, internationality, knowledge of current affairs and participatory learning. The aim is to gain the ability to analyze and understand European and international development processes. Graduates will have excellent career prospects for working in international organizations and enterprises, public or diplomatic services, as well as in research.

■ LAW

European and International Business Law

The LL.M. program focusses on the European and international legal framework for internationally operating enterprises and the relevant economic governance issues. A special emphasis is put on European Union business law as well as the enterprises' legal position, when doing business within the European market or internationally. The program is of special interest for persons who are affiliated with or plan to work for internationally operating business law firms or enterprises, government agencies, business lobbies or any other European and international organizations. As supplementary study options, the master's program offers a student exchange program with Stanford Law School as well as a dual LL.M. option and a student exchange with Santa Clara University School of Law (both in California). It also offers an MBA option with the Vienna University of Technology (TU Wien).

Human Rights

The one-year postgraduate program "Human Rights" has a clear jurisprudential profile. It will provide for insights to theoretical legal questions and also convey practical skills that are necessary for working in the field of human rights.

Based on the academic excellence of the University of Vienna and on the high reputation of the Ludwig Boltzmann Institute of Fundamental and Human Rights for conducting applied research, the program can best be described with the words: "Where Science Meets Practice!" The master's program is aimed at law graduates and employed persons, e.g. in public administration, academia, the education sector, NGOs and civil society or the private sector (corporate lawyers, attorneys, legal trainees, consultants) who want to specialize in human rights.

International Law

The continuing education master's program in International Law at the University of Vienna is a one-year full-time or a two-year part-time program. It aims at deepening the knowledge of structures and specific issues in international law – such as: fundamental issues of international law, international economic law, international organizations and international dispute settlement. Students acquire knowledge and skills that are important for the practice of international law, in international organizations, governmental agencies, as well as in internationally operating law firms and enterprises.

■ COMMUNICATION & MEDIA

Data Steward

Research data, as valuable research results, require professional management. Comprehensive research data management is therefore becoming increasingly important. Data stewards operate at the interface between scientists, scholars and research infrastructure and help to bridge the gap between these areas. They support researchers in processing data in a sustainable way and carry out needs assessments and requirements engineering. This certificate program will help the participants to acquire knowledge, expertise and key competences to perform tasks as data stewards in research institutions.
